PORCELAIN WITH A SPECIAL TOUCH

The Dutch artist and ceramicist Jacqueline Harberink is known for her minimalist, handmade porcelain designs where simplicity, purity and down-to-earth style combine to create an elegant result.

She investigates complex, labour-intensive techniques that have fallen into disuse over the years, gives them a modern look, and then applies this to her porcelain. Through the use of the shellac and rice grain techniques, among others, and various glazes that she prepares herself, the strength and versatility of porcelain becomes tangible in a striking way.

"In nature everything has a purpose. Even if it is fragile and fine. One cannot exist without the other. I find that fascinating and extremely inspiring. Beautiful but useful. I aspire to this essence in all my design."

The [NON-] TRANSPARENCY collection has been inspired by our vulnerable yet very valuable right to privacy. Harberink opens up her designs by making holes in them. The artist later invisibly closes them again using a transparent glaze. Closing these holes represents a way to retain our personal little secrets. The technique is based on the 14th century Chinese "rice-grain".

Standard available in white.

All JHA PORCELAIN designs are handmade by the Dutch artist and ceramicist Jacqueline Harberink. JHA PORCELAIN is renowned for its minimalist, handmade porcelain designs where simplicity, purity and down-to-earth style are combined to create elegant results. Its usable art, which varies from chandeliers and vases to tableware, is praised for its beauty and lightness, as well as its no-nonsense character. The organic and sustainable appearance, the lightness of the material and the original textures help to stimulate many senses. That is why Jacqueline Harberink always asks people to touch the porcelain, because this is the first step in the sensory experience.

Dutch artist and ceramicist Jacqueline Harberink explores complex, labour-intensive techniques that have been forgotten over the years and incorporates them into her porcelain after giving them a modern look. By using techniques including shellac and rice grain, as well as various self-prepared glazes, she is able to truly demonstrate the strength and versatility of porcelain. Jacqueline developed her enthusiasm and passion for ceramics, and porcelain in particular, while studying at the Escuela de Ceramica di Moncloa in Madrid (Spain). She perfected her techniques by attending specialised ceramic and porcelain workshops in the Netherlands and Italy.

All JHA PORCELAIN designs are handmade by the Dutch artist and ceramicist Jacqueline Harberink. Making porcelain requires a lot of patience. It's a slow process and you cannot be in a hurry. Little flaws made during the making process will always show up at the end. Porcelain is not forgiving. If you do take your time, the results are stunning.
